

Risk disclosure

Trading in foreign currency instruments and CFDs involves high degree of risk. The possibility exists that you could sustain a loss in excess of your deposited funds and therefore, you should not speculate with capital that you cannot afford to lose. You should carefully consider your objectives, financial situation, needs and level of experience. You should be aware of all the risks associated with trading on margin. Some risks you can face are described in the given Disclosure. However, there are many other risks which are not listed here.

1. Leverage risks

1.1. Even slight change of rate could end up either in profit, or loss of money. Client acknowledges that there is possibility to lose part or even the entire deposit due to currency rate change.

1.2. The company is not responsible for any losses caused by wrong trading system or neglecting rules of money management.

2. Technical risks

2.1. The company is not responsible for any losses caused by lack of knowledge and experience.

2.2. Client is responsible for his account information (number and password). He should not let third parties get access to his trading platform. Client will still be bound by this agreement even if account information is used by third parties.

2.3. Client accepts risks which may be caused by telecommunicational or software failure, and other technical faults.

2.4. Client accepts risks of unplanned position openings due to possible execution latency of the previous order.

2.5. Client acknowledges that all the information sent by e-mail or SMS is not secured from any unauthorized access.

3. Force majeure

3.1. The company is not responsible for any losses caused by force majeure, described in user-end license agreement, such like: military operations, terrorism, natural disasters, financial market halts, spot intervention, government decisions, low liquidity, or change of contractor's working conditions.